AFCIN-4E-7 Comments/Conclusions: -

f. Inclosure #6: The evidence presented in this report indicates the possibility that radar reflections from clouds or rain storms caused the unexplained blips. Equipments which operate at S-band usually are more susceptible to weather phenomena than L-band equipments. It is assumed that the search equipment which did not pick up the reported blips was operating in the L-band.

1. At first glance this report resembled what might be expected of the sighting of a weather balloon slowly descending to earth. However, the size of the return (big as a quarter) is more indicative of the return from a storm center. Since the weather was rainy, it is probable that what was seen was weather return.
