Thought fail possibly from British a/c because witness had read article that British a/c had penetrated our air defense.	11. COMMENTS Report of chaff, used in jamming radar.

Extract from C D Report - Layer 200 - 7 to 8 Jan 63

At 2045 Mr. [REDACTED] called to report the following:

While out hunting he noticed small strips of tin foil scattered over a wide area of farm land. He was curious at the time, but did not collect any samples of the material. He became more curious and concerned when he read that British bombers had penetrated our air defenses, and thought that perhaps the foil strips were some type of British radar jamming material. He contacted the CAP who suggested that he collect some samples and notify FTD.

Mr. [REDACTED] returned to the scene, but a recent snow fall had concealed the foil for the time being. He said that it is starting to thaw now and he should be able to find some samples in the next day or two.

Mr. [REDACTED] a machinist, described the strips as being about 1/4 to 5/16 in. wide and 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 in. long.

Thanked him for his report and advised him that report would be delivered to appropriate branch of FTD for action.
